RECH 430 ONU 152 CADREFIN 188

The Council adopted the conclusions contained in document 18862/11.

The Commission made a statement as set out hereafter.

Statement by the Commission

"The Commission attaches high importance to the effective integration of biodiversity into the key sectoral policies. The EU Biodiversity Strategy to 2020 includes specific integration targets and actions, in particular in relation to agriculture, forests and fisheries. As stated by the Council over the past two years, further integrating and mainstreaming biodiversity into all relevant policies needs to be significantly strengthened, particularly considering the benefits that biodiversity and ecosystem services provides for a large number of sectors.

Maintaining and restoring agriculture and forest biodiversity is a precondition to attain our biodiversity objectives. Therefore, the Commission can only regret the absence of ambition of these conclusions on agriculture integration. More specifically, the Commission regrets the deletion of all concrete indications on the required way forward to strengthen the contribution of the Common Agriculture Policy to biodiversity objectives.

As highlighted in its proposals on the reform of the Common Agriculture Policy, the Commission reiterates the importance for biodiversity of maintaining permanent grasslands; of protecting and supporting Ecological Focus Areas; and of ensuring crop diversification; and emphasises in this context the importance of action at farm level. The Commission further underscores the importance of incorporating biodiversity elements – in particular in relation to Natura 2000, High Nature Value farming and the protection and restoration of wider biodiversity – into rural development, and of recognising the value of ecosystem services provided by farmers. These priorities will continue to guide the Commission's position in inter-institutional discussions on the reform of the Common Agriculture Policy."
