-----------------	---

Subject:	Proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Directive 2003/98/EC on re-use of public sector information
----------	--

In view of the Telecommunications Working Party on 7 September, delegations will find at Annex I a Presidency draft on the above proposal.

Annex II comprises the consolidated version of Directive 2003/98/EC with the proposed changes. Changes proposed by the Commission as part of the proposal (doc. 18555/11) are in italics.

Changes compared to the proposal (doc. 18555/11), up to and including those in document DS 1315/12, are in bold (and deletions in ~~strikethrough~~),

The changes since the last version (document DS 1315/12) are in bold underlined (and deletions in ~~strikethrough underlined~~).

The proposed changes reflect the discussions held in the Working Party on 20 July that focused on the set of questions addressed to delegations in the document 12237/12 and the delegations' written comments on the same. They also take into account the concerns raised during the discussion of doc. DS 1315/12 in the Working Party and the ensuing discussions at the TTE Council of 8 June.

Besides improving the readability of the text, the main proposed changes, some of which build on what was already introduced in DS 1315/12, aim at:

- Providing the Member States with the possibility of future, non-binding, Commission guidelines that could provide clarification or guidance on the marginal costs and other charging issues: Recital 18 and Article 6(6).
- Further clarifying the role of the 'impartial review body' with powers of review, and making it distinct from an 'appropriate body' or 'appropriate bodies', competent to set the objective, transparent and verifiable criteria for charging above marginal costs: Recitals 12, 12a, and 14a, and Articles 4(4) and 6.
- Emphasising the compatibility between the legal systems of the Member States and the organisation of the bodies whose existence is necessary under the Directive - the 'impartial review body' and the 'appropriate body': Recitals 12a and 14a.
- Clarifying that all decisions on a request for re-use should be subject to a redress procedure. This should include refusals (negative decisions) but also decisions which, although permitting re-use, may be open to appeal on other grounds, notably to allow contesting the charging rules applied: Recital 14a and Article 4(4).
- Emphasising the principle that the Directive is without prejudice to national and EU rules on privacy protection: Recital 16 and new Recital 7c.

During the discussions held in the Working Party on 20 July, most Member States emphasised that Article 6(2) should contain an “open” list of exceptions which would allow for certain flexibility. Few Member States opposed the “open” list as it would undermine the uniform implementation of the Directive, the harmonisation effect and would not improve the functioning the internal market.

Article 6(2), as it currently stands, constitutes a closed list and in the view of the Presidency also allows at the same time for a certain degree of flexibility. More clearly defined exceptions could be potentially added to this list to address the situations that create concern for Member States. For example, an exception could be added for public institutions that incur significant additional costs linked to the investments made in order to make their data available in digital form.

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,
Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 114 thereof,
Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,
After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national Parliaments,
Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee⁵,
Having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions⁶,
Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,
Whereas:

- (1) Directive 2003/98/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 17 November 2003 on the re-use of public sector information⁷ establishes a minimum set of rules governing the re-use and the practical means of facilitating re-use of existing documents held by public sector bodies of the Member States.
- (2) Open data policies which encourage the wide availability and re-use of public sector information for private or commercial purposes, with minimal or no legal, technical or financial constraints, can play an important role in kick-starting the development of new services based on novel ways to combine and make use of such information. However, this requires a level playing field at Union level in terms of whether or not the re-use of documents is authorised, which cannot be achieved by leaving it up to the different rules and practices of the Member States or the public sector bodies concerned.
- (3) Allowing re-use of documents held by a public sector body adds value for the re-users, for the end users and for the society in general and in many cases for the public sector body itself, by providing feedback from re-users and end users which allows the holder to improve the quality of the information collected.

⁶ OJ C , , p. .

⁷ OJ L 345, 31.12.2003, p. 90.

- (4) Since the first set of rules on re-use of public sector information was adopted in 2003, the amount of data in the world, including public data, has exploded and new types of data are being generated and collected. In parallel, we are witnessing continuous revolution in technologies for analysis, exploitation and processing of data. This rapid technological evolution makes it possible to create new services and new applications, which are built upon the use, aggregation or combination of data. The rules adopted in 2003 no longer keep pace with these rapid changes and as a result the economic and social opportunities offered by re-use of public data risk to be missed.
- (5) At the same time, Member States have now established re-use policies under the 2003/98/EC Directive and some of them have been adopting ambitious open data approaches to make re-use of accessible public data easier for citizens and businesses beyond the minimum level set up by the Directive. To prevent different rules in different Member States acting as a barrier for the cross-border offer of products and services, and to enable comparable public data sets to be re-usable for pan-European applications based on them, a minimum harmonisation is also required as to what public data is available for re-use in the internal information market, consistent with the relevant access regime.
- (5a) ~~Member States have adopted rules allowing access by members of the public to the documents held by public sector bodies under the principles of transparency and freedom of information. At the same time, they have placed limits on the rights of access. In some cases, access is restricted, for example to those who show a special interest, and in other cases, access is excluded because of the sensitive nature of the information for example based on the grounds of national security, defence or public security.~~

- (6) Directive 2003/98/EC does not contain an obligation on access to documents or an obligation to allow re-use of documents. The decision whether or not to authorise re-use remains with the Member States or the public sector body concerned. At the same time, the Directive builds on national rules on access to documents and so re-use of documents is not required under the Directive where access is restricted (for example, national rules restrict access to citizens or companies who prove a particular interest to obtain access to documents) or excluded (for example, national rules exclude access because of the sensitive nature of the documents based, inter alia, on the grounds of national security, defence, public security). Some Member States have expressly linked the right of re-use to this right of access, so that all generally accessible documents are re-usable. In other Member States, the link between the two sets of rules is less clear and this is a source of legal uncertainty.
- (7) Directive 2003/98/EC should be therefore amended to lay down a clear obligation for Member States to make all ~~generally available accessible~~ documents re-usable unless access is restricted or excluded under national rules on access to documents and subject to the other exceptions laid down in the Directive. These amendments do not seek to define or change access regimes within Member States, which remain under the responsibility of the Member States. ~~Generally accessible documents are documents accessible under the national rules on access to documents (where access does not require the demonstration of any specific individual interest, and documents that public sector bodies license, disseminate or give out). As it constitutes a limitation to the intellectual property rights held by the authors of the documents, the scope of such a link between the right of access and the right of use should be narrowed to what is strictly necessary to reach the objectives pursued by its introduction. In this respect, taking into account the Union legislation and Member States' and Union's international obligations, notably under the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works and the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (the TRIPS Agreement), documents on which third parties hold intellectual property rights should be excluded from the scope of Directive 2003/98/EC. If a third party was the initial owner of a document held by libraries (including university libraries), museums and archives that is still protected by intellectual property rights, that document should, for the purpose of this Directive, be considered as a document for which third parties hold intellectual property rights.~~

- (7a) ~~As it constitutes a limitation to the intellectual property rights held by the authors of the documents, the scope of such a link between the right of access and the right of use should be narrowed to what is strictly necessary to reach the objectives pursued by its introduction. In this respect,~~ Taking into account the Union legislation and Member States' and Union's international obligations, notably under the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works and the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (the TRIPS Agreement), documents on which third parties hold intellectual property rights should be excluded from the scope of Directive 2003/98/EC. If a third party was the initial owner of a document held by libraries (including university libraries), museums and archives that is still protected by intellectual property rights, that document should, for the purpose of this Directive, be considered as a document for which third parties hold intellectual property rights.
- (7b) For the purpose of identifying documents the supply of which is an activity falling outside the scope of the public task of the public sector bodies concerned as defined by law or by other binding rules in the Member State, the public task could be defined generally or on a case-by-case basis for individual public sector bodies.
- (7c) This Directive should be implemented and applied in full compliance with the principles relating to the protection of personal data in accordance with the Directive 95/46/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 24 October 1995 on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of data and of the free movement of such data. In particular, re-use of documents access to which is not restricted by virtue of access regimes in the Member States should respect the restrictions set by national law in compliance with Directive 95/46/EC on processing of personal data contained therein.
- (8) The application of Directive 2003/98/EC should be without prejudice to the rights that employees of public sector bodies may enjoy under national rules.
- (9) Moreover, where any document is made available for re-use, the public sector body concerned should retain the right to exploit the document.

- (10) The scope of application of the Directive is extended to libraries (including university libraries), museums and archives. The Directive does not apply to other cultural institutions, such as operas, ballets or theatres, including the archives that are part of these institutions.
- (11) To facilitate re-use, public sector bodies should make documents available through machine readable formats and together with their metadata where possible and appropriate, in a format that ensures interoperability , e.g. by processing them in a way consistent with the principles governing the compatibility and usability requirements for spatial information under Directive 2007/2/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 March 2007 establishing an Infrastructure for Spatial Information in the European Community (INSPIRE)⁸
- (11a) A document should be considered as a document in a machine readable format if it is in a file format that is structured in such a way that software applications can easily identify, recognise and extract data of interest from it. Data encoded in files that are structured in a machine-readable format are machine-readable data. Machine-readable formats can be open (for example Comma Separated Values) or proprietary (for example as used by various proprietary spreadsheet programs, such as XLS); they can be formal standards (for example XML or RDF) or not (for example Comma Separated Values). Documents encoded in a file format that limits such automatic processing, because the data cannot or cannot easily be extracted from these documents, should not be considered as documents in machine-readable format. Member States should when appropriate encourage the use of open, machine-readable formats.

- (12) Where charges are made for supplying and allowing the re-use of documents, they should in principle be limited to the marginal costs ~~incurred for their reproduction and dissemination, unless higher charges are exceptionally justified according to objective, transparent and verifiable criteria~~. However, the necessity of not hindering the normal running of public sector bodies that are required to covering a substantial part of their operating costs relating to the performance of their public task ~~from the exploitation of their intellectual property rights~~ as well as the normal running of libraries, museums and archives should notably be taken into consideration. Those public sector bodies should be allowed to charge higher charges for re-use. ThoseSuch charges above marginal costs should be set according to objective, transparent and verifiable criteria and the total income from supplying and allowing re-use of documents should not exceed the cost of collection, production, reproduction and dissemination, together with a reasonable return on investment. Member States should designate the appropriate body authority` (other than the public sector body itself) competent to approve review the criteria for charging. That authority body could be an existing authority body with budgetary executive powers and under political responsibility. It should however be distinct from the independent authority with powers to review public sector bodies' decisions on re-use. The burden of proving that charges are cost-oriented and comply with relevant limits criteria should lie with the public sector body charging for the re-use of documents.
- (12a) Member States should designate the appropriate body or appropriate bodies, other than the public sector body itself, competent to lay down the criteria for charging above marginal costs. That body should be organised in accordance with the constitutional and legal systems of Member States. It could be an existing body with budgetary executive powers and under political responsibility.
- (13) In relation to any re-use that is made of the document, public sector bodies may, where practicable, impose conditions on the re-user, such as acknowledgment of source. Any licences for the re-use of public sector information should in any case place as few restrictions on re-use as possible. Open licences available online, which grant wider re-use rights without technological, financial or geographical limitations and relying on open data formats, may also play an important role in this respect. Therefore, Member States should encourage the use of open government licences.

- (14) ~~Proper implementation of some of the features of this Directive, such as means of redress, compliance with charging principles and reporting obligations require supervision by independent authorities competent on the re-use of public sector information. To ensure consistency between approaches at Union level, coordination between the independent authorities should be encouraged, particularly through the exchange of information on best practices and data re-use policies.~~
- (14a) ~~The independent authorities~~ impartial review body with powers to review public sector bodies' decisions on re-use should be organised in accordance with the constitutional and legal systems of Member States and should not prejudice any means of redress otherwise available to applicants for re-use ~~and public sector bodies~~. It should however be distinct from the appropriate body or appropriate bodies competent to lay down the criteria for charging above marginal costs. The means of redress should include the possibility of review of negative decisions but also of decisions which, although permitting re-use, could still affect applicants on other grounds, notably by the charging rules applied. The ~~authority~~ impartial review body should have powers to review any public sector body's decision on re-use. Member States could grant appropriate powers to existing ~~authorities~~ bodies such as the national competition authority, ~~or~~ the national access to documents authority or the national judicial system authorities.
- (14b) Competition rules should be respected when establishing the principles for re-use of documents avoiding as far as possible exclusive agreements between public sector bodies and private partners. However, in order to provide a service in the public interest, an exclusive right to re-use specific public sector documents may sometimes be necessary. This may be, inter alia, the case if no commercial publisher would publish the information or if digitisation of public cultural resources would not be possible without a public-private partnership concluded between a library, museum or archive and a commercial partner without such an exclusive right. A period of preferential commercial exploitation of the digitised material may be necessary in order to give the private partner the possibility to recoup its investment. This period should be limited in time and as short as possible, in order to respect the principle that public domain material should stay in the public domain once it is digitised. The period of preferential use should not exceed in general 7 years. In addition, any public private partnership for digitisation of cultural resources shall grant the partner cultural institution full rights with respect to the post-termination use of digitised objects.

- (15) Since the objective of this Directive, namely to facilitate the creation of Union-wide information products and services based on public sector documents, to ensure the effective cross-border use of public sector documents by private companies for added-value information products and services, and to limit distortions of competition on the Union market, cannot be sufficiently achieved by Member States and can therefore, in view of the intrinsic pan-European scope of the proposed action, be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union. In accordance with the principles of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary in order to achieve those objectives.
- (16) This Directive respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised in particular by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, including the right to property (Article 17) and protection of personal data (Article 8). Nothing in this Directive should be interpreted or implemented in a manner that is inconsistent with the European Convention on Human Rights.
- ~~(17)~~ It is necessary to ensure that the Member States ~~(see recital 19)~~ report to the Commission on the extent of the re-use of public sector information, and the conditions under which it is made available, ~~and the work of the independent authority~~. ~~To ensure consistency between approaches at Union level, coordination between the independent authorities should be encouraged, particularly through exchange of information on best practices and data re-use policies.~~
- ~~(18)~~ ~~The Commission should assist the Member States in implementing the Directive in a consistent way by giving guidance, particularly on charging and calculation of costs, on recommended licensing conditions and on formats, after consulting interested parties.~~ The Commission may assist the Member States in implementing the Directive in a consistent way by making available guidelines on recommended standard licenses, and datasets and charging for the re-use of documents.

- ~~(19)~~ In accordance with the Joint Political Declaration of Member States and the Commission on explanatory documents of [date], Member States have undertaken to accompany, in justified cases, the notification of their transposition measures with one or more documents explaining the relationship between the components of a directive and the corresponding parts of national transposition instruments. With regard to this Directive, the legislator considers the transmission of such documents to be justified.
- (20) Directive 2003/98/EC should therefore be amended accordingly,
