

Gender Equality Index 2017

Conference // 11 October 2017, Brussels

152762/EU XXV.GP
Eingelangt am 25/08/17

Excellencies,

Dear Madam/Sir,

The European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE) will release the third edition of the Gender Equality Index for the EU on 11 October 2017. You are kindly invited to the event hosted under the auspices of the Estonian Presidency of the Council of the EU.

The conference will provide a forum for around 300 decision-makers and practitioners to discuss the findings of the Gender Equality Index 2017. We will look at recent trends and seek solutions to gender inequalities in the current political and economic context.

The upcoming Gender Equality Index provides a broader scope to understand trends and progress in gender equality in the EU. Its satellite domain of intersecting inequalities reveals some of the vast gender imbalances within a few selected groups of women and men based on age, disability, family type, country of birth and education. With the availability of new indicators, this edition also provides new data for social power and health behaviour.

The conference will take place on 11 October from 09:00-17:00 in the Justus Lipsius building, Rue de la Loi 175, 1000 Brussels, Belgium. Please be aware that access to the building requires you to pass a tight security check. In order to allow a smooth start, you are kindly encouraged to start registering from 8:00 am.

Please note that the participants are responsible for their own travel and accommodation.

Looking forward to getting your views on the findings of the Gender Equality Index 2017!

Yours faithfully,

Virginija Langbakk | The European Institute
Director | for Gender Equality

Kaja Tael | The Permanent Representative
Ambassador | of Estonia to the EU

09:30–11:00 GENDER EQUALITY INDEX 2017
Gender equality in disrupted times

This session will reveal the results of the Gender Equality Index 2017. We will see how far the EU and its Member States have progressed towards achieving gender equality since 2005, and in which areas the situation of women and men notably improved or deteriorated. The session will focus on new indicators and data of the Gender Equality Index 2017. The results will be discussed in the context of recent challenges in the EU, ranging from the economic and financial crisis, and migration flows to the rise of populist and anti-EU sentiments.

How can intersectional analysis of inequalities contribute to better-informed policy making in the EU?

The Gender Equality Index monitors the trend of the complex reality of gender equality for specific groups of people, this way facilitating the planning and implementation of more targeted and efficient policy measures. Intersectional analysis explores how the personal characteristics of women and men intersect and create unique realities for them. This session will unmask some of the explicit differences within groups of women and men, accounting for a few of the most common characteristics of disadvantage: age, disability, migrant background, education and family composition.

Marre Karu, EIGE

High-level panel debate with policy makers and experts:

Ernest Urtasun, Member, European Parliament

Irena Moozova, Director, European Commission Directorate-General for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality

Pirkko Mahlamäki, Executive Committee Member, European Disability Forum

Pavel Trantina, President, Section for Employment, Social Affairs and Citizenship, European Economic and Social Committee

Focus:

- How would the European Agenda on Migration be more effective by setting gender-specific targets?
- What measures are needed to ensure gender equality among older people or people with disabilities?
- What new pathways could the work-life balance package provide to ensure equal economic independence and equal sharing of care duties between women and men?

Gender equality and health: are women and men equally healthy?

The Gender Equality Index aims to strengthen the understanding of gender as an important social determinant of health with a view to make health policies and strategies more responsive to women's and men's needs across their life-course. Women live longer, but in poorer health than men, especially because of differences in their behaviour and different interactions with health structures and institutions. This session presents new data on health / risk behaviours of women and men, which also act as health determinants: smoking, harmful alcohol consumption, healthy diets (daily consumption of fruits and vegetables) and regular physical activity.

Zuzana Madarova, EIGE

High-level panel debate with policy makers and experts:

Xavier Prats-Monné, Director-General, European Commission Directorate-General for Health and Food Safety

Sirpa Pietikäinen, Member, European Parliament

Peg Maguire, Director-General, European Institute of Women's Health

Focus:

- How can gender gaps be better addressed by health policies?
- How can the different health needs of women and men be met effectively by policies?
- How to ensure better evidence to improve women's and men's health?
- Can gender mainstreaming ensure stronger synergies between social, economic and health policies?

REFLECTIONS IN THE PLENARY

Decision-making in research, media and sports

The Gender Equality Index, for the first time, presents gender gaps in decision-making in research, media and sports aiming to strengthen public debate and policy initiatives on gender equality in social domains. Persistent gender imbalances in decision-making in cultural institutions require more visibility and action because of their symbolic and educational importance and powerful role in shaping social norms, public opinion and perceptions about gender equality.
