Exchange of views

On the basis of the questions proposed by the Presidency in ST 5241/2018 INIT, the Council exchanged views on the Commission Communication on "The Future of Food and Farming" focusing on the CAP's added value, the EU's key objectives to maintain and further enhance it and the appropriate level of subsidiarity. The Council also took note of the information provided by Commissioner Hogan on the main aspects of the Communication. At the end of the discussion, the Presidency concluded the agenda item delivering the oral conclusions of the debate as follows:

1. Ministers emphasised the added value of the CAP for farmers, citizens and society as a whole, and its key role in providing safe, high-quality food in sufficient quantities, protecting the environment, mitigating climate change and keeping rural areas strong and sustainable, contributing to a fair income for farmers and maintaining agricultural production throughout the EU, including in less favoured areas.

2. Several Ministers considered that the CAP's added value could be further enhanced, in particular with regard to protecting the environment, adapting and mitigating climate change and meeting the UN 2030 Sustainable Development Goals. However, this would only be possible through a trust-based partnership with farmers. Therefore, it is important that farmers remain at the centre of the policy and that the CAP after 2020 provide them with the right incentives.
3. Many Ministers made it clear that the added value achieved so far had been possible only thanks to the current level of EU support. If farmers are to continue to provide these and further public goods, they should be rewarded accordingly.
4. In addition Ministers considered that the CAP objectives set out in the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU) were still valid, and stressed in particular the importance of ensuring farmers a fair standard of living. They also emphasised the need for the CAP to ensure equal treatment and fair competition among farmers, as well as with all others in the food chain.
5. Ministers generally welcomed the Commission's suggestion to increase the current level of subsidiarity. At the same time, they stressed the importance of simplification and sufficient flexibility for Member States to take into account national and regional specificities, without undermining the level playing field. Delegations advocated reducing the administrative burden for both farmers and public authorities and preventing delays in payments, building on the lessons learned from the Rural Development Programmes. Several Ministers considered that greater subsidiarity should not compromise the 'common' character of the CAP, which should remain a truly European policy. Any 're-nationalisation' or fragmentation of the CAP would compromise its added value. The greater subsidiarity should be implemented in such way as to enable the Member States to take pertinent tailor-made strategic national choices, while truly contributing to objectives agreed at EU level.
6. With specific regard to the 'CAP Strategic Plans' proposed in the communication, Ministers required further information in order to better understand their impact (in particular on the first pillar).
