Recommendation for a

COUNCIL DECISION

authorising the opening of negotiations for an agreement between the European Union and the Republic of Peru on the exchange of personal data between the European Union Agency for Law Enforcement Cooperation (Europol) and the Peruvian authorities competent for fighting serious crime and terrorism

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

1. PURPOSE

The EU should open negotiations with the Republic of Peru with the purpose of signing and concluding an Agreement enabling the exchange of personal data between Europol and the Peruvian authorities competent for fighting serious crime and terrorism.

2. CONTEXT OF THE RECOMMENDATION

In the globalised world where serious crime and terrorism are increasingly transnational and polyvalent, law enforcement authorities should be fully equipped to cooperate with external partners to ensure the security of their citizens. In line with the EU Security Union Strategy¹, Europol can play a key role in expanding cooperation with third countries to counter crime and terrorism in coherence with other EU external policies and tools. The April 2021 EU Strategy to tackle Organised Crime highlights an urgent need to further develop Europol's serious and organised crime intelligence and to enhance information exchange and investigative actions with (additional) third countries and regions constituting major hubs for high-risk organised crime affecting EU Member States².

For Europol, cooperation with third countries and international organisations is essential to support Member States in countering serious crime and terrorism. The need to strengthen the cooperation with third countries is even more important in light of the Serious and Organised Threat Assessment 2021 prepared by Europol. As an example, the main findings of this threat assessment recognises that Latin America criminal networks will continue to cooperate with organised criminal groups based in the European Union to traffic drugs.

In so far as necessary for the performance of its tasks, Europol may establish and maintain cooperative relations with international partners through working and administrative arrangements, which however do not by themselves provide a legal basis for the exchange of personal data. Unlike an international agreement, those arrangements are concluded by Europol and they do not bind the EU or its Member States³.

Regulation 2016/794⁴ of the European Parliament and of the Council of 11 May 2016 changed the legal framework for the exchange of personal data between Europol and third countries. Since the entry into force of this Regulation on 1 May 2017, the competence to conclude international agreements between Europol and third countries has been transferred to the Union acting pursuant to Article 218 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU)⁵. Following a proposal from the Commission, the Council has already adopted nine negotiation authorisations with third countries⁶ and an authorisation to negotiate a comprehensive agreement with Interpol that also covers the exchange of personal data with Europol⁷. The first Agreement was recently signed with New Zealand⁸.

While this Recommendation specifically concerns negotiations with Peru, it should be seen as part of a broader effort to enhance law enforcement cooperation between the EU and Latin American countries of interest. In that regard, the European Commission is recommending in parallel to open negotiations for similar international agreements with Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador and Mexico with the ultimate aim to enhance the fight against terrorism and serious crime.

3. OBJECTIVES OF THE RECOMMENDATION

Latin American's organised crime groups pose a serious threat to the EU internal security as their actions are increasingly linked to a series of crimes within the Union, particularly in the realm of drug trafficking. The 2021 EU Serious and Organised Crime Threat Assessment (SOCTA) highlights that unprecedented quantities of illicit drugs are trafficked to the EU from Latin America, generating multi-billion-euro profits, which are used to finance a diverse range of criminal organisations (international and EU-based) and to weaken the rule of law in the EU⁹.

Recent reports confirm that cocaine availability in Europe is at an all-time high and the drug is more affordable and accessible for consumers than in the past¹⁰. In accordance with data from the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the Republic of Peru is the second largest coca cultivating country globally, accounting for 26% of global cultivation¹¹. This fact has concrete consequences for the EU, as a third (32 %) of the total number of EU cocaine samples tested originated from Peru; an increase from the previous years¹². Most of the product seized in the EU is transported by sea, primarily in maritime shipping containers¹³, and shipped to the EU directly from the countries of production, including the Republic of Peru, as well as from neighbouring countries of departure in Latin America¹⁴. Organised crime organisations based in that continent are well established and also active in other crime areas that fall within Europol's mandate, such as cybercrimes, money laundering, and environmental crimes.

In its Programming Document 2022-2024, Europol has flagged that, among others, the growing demand for drugs and increased drug trafficking routes into the EU justify the need for enhanced cooperation with Latin American countries¹⁵. In this sense, in December 2020, the Republic of Peru was included in Europol's list of priority partners with which the agency may conclude Working Arrangements.

Peru is participating in the Community of Latin American and Caribbean States (CELAC) Coordination and Cooperation Mechanism on Drugs. Moreover, the Republic of Peru is member of the Police Community of the Americas (Ameripol) and of the Latin American Interior Security Committee (CLASI)¹⁶, which has been established in 2022 and driven by the Europe Latin America Programme of Assistance against Transnational Organised Crime (EL PAcCTO)¹⁷. The country thus has been committed to contributing to the dismantling of organised crime groups involved in drug production and trafficking. In fact, Peru has been identified as a key international partner to reduce the global supply of cocaine by the European Monitoring Centre for Drugs and Drug Addiction (EMCDDA)¹⁸.

Increased operational cooperation and the sharing of relevant information between Europol and the Republic of Peru would be important in countering serious offences in many crime areas of common interest, such as drug trafficking and environmental crimes. Due to the lack of a valid legal basis under Union law, however, Peruvian law enforcement authorities competent for fighting serious crime and terrorism cannot receive any personal data from Europol. This represents thus a hindrance for further developing the cooperation between both parties.

For these reasons and taking into account the EU's political strategy as outlined in the EU Security Union Strategy¹⁹, the EU Drugs Strategy 2021-2025²⁰, and the EU Drugs Action Plan 2021-2025²¹, the Commission considers it necessary to add Peru as a priority country to start negotiations on an agreement enabling the exchange of personal data between Europol and the Peruvian competent authorities in the short term.

4. LEGAL ELEMENTS

Regulation (EU) 2016/794 on the European Union Agency for Law Enforcement Cooperation (Europol) sets out a legal framework for Europol, in particular its objectives, tasks, scope of competence, data protection safeguards and ways to cooperate with external partners.

This Recommendation is consistent with the provisions of the Europol Regulation.

The objective of this recommendation is to obtain from the Council the authorisation for the Commission to negotiate an international agreement on behalf of the EU. The legal basis for the Council to authorise the opening of negotiations is Article 218(3) and (4) TFEU.

In line with Article 218 TFEU, the Commission shall be authorised to negotiate on behalf of the EU an Agreement with the Republic of Peru on the exchange of personal data between the Europol and the Peruvian competent authorities competent for fighting serious crime and terrorism.

The Union has already exercised its competence in this field and has established rules in this respect by adopting a framework of rules regulating Europol activities, including on processing personal data.
