		(1a) It is necessary to understand that there is a high probability of an unavoidable penalty to reduce road traffic hazards. Knowledge of the rules in force in the various Member States promotes road safety and a reduction in traffic offences.

12	(2) The practice of enforcement authorities involved in the investigation of road-safety-related traffic offences has shown that the current wording of Directive (EU) 2015/413 fails in facilitating an effective investigation of the road-safety-related traffic offences committed by non-resident drivers and in the enforcement of financial penalties to the desired degree. That results in a relative impunity of non-resident drivers and has a negative impact on road safety in the Union. Furthermore, procedural and fundamental rights of non-resident drivers are not always respected in the context of cross-border investigations, in particular due to a lack of transparency in the setting of the amount of the fines and in the appeal procedures. The extension of the scope should also reflect the technical progress in the automatic detection of road-safety-related traffic offences.	The extension of the scope should also reflect the technical progress in the automatic detection of road-safety-related traffic offences. While not respecting the rules on vehicle access restrictions not only relates to road safety, but also to traffic management or pollution prevention, it should also be part of the scope as Member States experience similar challenges in enforcing these rules on non-residents. Because of adding the rules on vehicle access restrictions, it would be appropriate to extend the legal basis with Article 91(1), point (d), while taking into account that according to Article 11 of the TFEU environmental protection requirements must be integrated into the implementation of the Union's policies.

		(25a) The Commission should explore different means for enhancing the cooperation and exchange of information on road-safety traffic offences to improve enforcement, between the Member States and neighbouring third countries. While this Directive aims to reduce the impunity of non-resident drivers within the Union, road safety-related offences by non-resident drivers registered outside the Union are a not insignificant problem.
