ITEMS DEBATEDCULTURE*Resolution on the cultural dimension of sustainable development

Ministers of culture adopted a resolution on the cultural dimension of sustainable development (13336/19).

The aim of the resolution is to strengthen the contribution of culture to sustainable development. Its adoption will trigger a process leading to an action plan on the cultural dimension of sustainable development at EU level. The plan will be developed by the Commission in cooperation with the member states and is expected to be included in the future EU implementation strategy for the 2030 Agenda.

In recent years, the work of the Council and the Commission in the area of culture has concentrated on promoting cultural diversity as well as the economic, social and external relations aspects of culture. The Council has been implementing work plans for culture since 2002 and the Commission has implemented the European Agenda for Culture (2007) and the New European Agenda for Culture (2018). Delivering on sustainability would constitute a response by the sector to the ‘New Strategic Agenda 2019-2024’¹ adopted by EU leaders in June. In this document, the EU leaders have identified sustainability as crucial to the European model for the future and have committed to investing in culture and cultural heritage, which are at the heart of European identity.

Strengths, innovation potential and global competitiveness of the European cultural, creative and audio-visual industries – public debate

On the basis of a presidency discussion paper (13341/19), ministers of culture held a public debate on the strengths, innovation potential and global competitiveness of the European cultural, creative and audio-visual industries (CCIs). They were invited to exchange views on the following questions:

- Which challenges facing the CCIs and more specifically the audio-visual industry do you consider to be the most urgent at both national and European level? What do you consider to be the most important strengths of these industries?
- Which actions and policy measures should the EU take as a matter of priority to strengthen its global competitiveness in a sustainable way in the field of audio-visual content creation and distribution?

Ministers identified a series of serious challenges for the CCIs in the EU. Among these were the power of big non-European players and the amount of data they control, which undermined competition. The fragmentation of the European market, the difficulty of accessing funding and the speed of digital transformation were also highlighted as the biggest challenges for European CCIs.

During the exchange of views, ministers pointed out some of the most important strengths of European CCIs:

- huge potential for growth
- ability to provide local content
- high quality of production
- linguistic and cultural diversity

Most of the participants in the debate highlighted that cooperation at European level in the areas of production and dissemination was key for strengthening the competitiveness of European CCIs. They also stressed the need to create favourable conditions for the functioning of CCIs through adopting appropriate legislative measures, facilitating funding, developing talent and investing in digital skills and media literacy. Ministers called for full use of EU funding through programmes such as Erasmus, Horizon Europe and Creative Europe. Some delegations provided examples of tax incentives for CCIs at national level.

SPORT

Conclusions on combatting corruption in sport

Ministers of sport adopted conclusions on combatting corruption in sport (13349/19 + COR 1). The fight against corruption in sport is a priority for Finland's presidency of the Council. The conclusions' main aim is to suggest how the EU and its member states and the sport movement can contribute to achieving integrity and fairness in sport. They recognise that while corruption in sport is not a new phenomenon, there is no overall EU approach to anti-corruption measures in sport.

Even though the fight against corruption in sport is not mentioned in the EU Treaties, corruption is recognised in the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU) as one of the 'areas of particularly serious crimes with a cross-border dimension'. Furthermore, the TFEU states that the EU's action is aimed at 'developing the European dimension in sport, by promoting fairness and openness in sporting competitions'.

Conclusions on safeguarding children in sport

Ministers also adopted conclusions on safeguarding children in sport (13351/1/19). The promotion of sport among children and young people, and the provision of a secure sports environment, are among the key priorities of Finland's presidency.

The conclusions cover both the protection of children and the promotion of children's well-being. The document identifies a number of measures and initiatives which can be undertaken or further developed to ensure that children in sport are protected from physical and emotional harm, abuse and neglect. The member states, the Commission and sport organisations are invited to actively participate in the design of such measures and initiatives and to further cooperate with each other.

Promoting good governance in sport

Ministers held a public debate on good governance in sport based on a presidency discussion paper (13355/19). They were joined by a guest speaker – Witold Banka, President of the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) and former Sports Minister of Poland. The debate focused on two questions:

- How can public authorities and the sports movement cooperate at EU and member state level in order to boost and foster good governance in sport?
- What benefits can cooperation at EU level bring in terms of promoting good governance in sport?

Ministers agreed that cooperation at both EU and national level and the sharing of best practices were key to achieving good governance in sport. They stressed that sports organisations also had to be encouraged to cooperate. Ministers highlighted the need to attach conditions to public funding for activities of sports organisations in order to provide them with an incentive to implement codes of conduct and work within a spirit of transparency. Some delegations also suggested implementing programmes for training and providing advice to leaders of sports bodies. Ministers insisted on using funding from the Erasmus programme to promote good governance in sport. They identified several benefits which cooperation at national and EU level could bring to good governance in sport:

- introducing common standards
- encouraging international sports bodies to adopt codes of conduct and rules on transparency
- contributing to fighting match-fixing, corruption, racism and discrimination

YOUTH

Conclusions on digital youth work

Ministers adopted conclusions on digital youth work (12681/19 + COR 1) whose main aim is to contribute to overcoming the digital gap among young people. The conclusions identify a series of measures to make better use of digital technologies in the area of youth work and to help youth workers in their activities. The member states and the Commission are invited to undertake and apply these measures.

Youth work includes various social, cultural, educational and sports-related activities carried out with, by and for young people outside the formal educational system. The activities are managed by professional or voluntary youth workers and youth leaders. The value of these activities has been recognised in the Council conclusions on youth work¹. Further to that, in 2017 the Council adopted conclusions on smart youth work², stressing the importance of using digital technologies in work with young people.

Conclusions on education and training of youth workers

Ministers also adopted conclusions on education and training of youth workers (13595/1/19). The conclusions recognise that education and training of youth workers should be adapted to meet the particular needs and conditions in individual member states. At the same time, they stress that there is a shared understanding as regards the educational and training needs of youth workers in the EU. The text invites the Commission and the member states to further explore how to improve the current youth work education and training systems in Europe.

The conclusions take into account the Resolution on the European Union Youth Strategy 2019-2027 adopted by the Council in 2019³. It invites the member states and the Commission to support the development of quality youth work at local, regional, national and European level, including training for youth workers.

A vision for youth work in Europe – climate change, young people and youth work – public debate

Ministers held a debate on how youth work can integrate the current main concerns of young people, in particular climate change. The discussion paper (13398/19), prepared by the presidency, contained three questions:

- How can we strengthen the capacity of youth work to respond to emerging challenges faced by young people in the context of climate change?
- How can youth work support young people in their climate activism and in building a sustainable future?
- Climate change is a cross-sectoral challenge. How can the youth sector act as a partner in cross-sectoral cooperation?

The debate started with a statement by Sara Nyman, vice-president of the Finnish National Youth Council. Sara Nyman told ministers that climate change deeply affected the lives of young people and urged public authorities to listen to young people across Europe and to integrate climate education in schools' curricula.

Ministers agreed that in order to strengthen the capacity of youth work to respond to climate change, high-level education and training on environmental issues and sustainable development had to be provided to all youth workers. They also stressed the importance of using more digital tools, providing funding for non-formal education schemes, including environmental issues in education at all levels and supporting mobility programmes.

On assisting young people in their climate activism, ministers identified the following measures:

- raising awareness among young people on environmental threats
- promoting a low-carbon and sustainable lifestyle
- involving young people in decision-making and the implementation of policies

Ministers also highlighted the importance of cross-sectoral cooperation at local, regional, national and EU level and the inclusion of environmental issues in all policy areas.
