Opinion

Title: Impact assessment / Transparency of political advertising

Overall opinion: POSITIVE WITH RESERVATIONS

(A) Policy context

This initiative concerns advertisements placed by or on behalf of political actors. Political advertisements are used in political campaigns. More generally, they shape opinion and contribute to the political debate. The initiative aims to increase transparency of political advertisements. It aims to support the functioning of the internal market for the provision of advertising services.

The Transparency of political advertising initiative was announced in the 2020 European Democracy Action Plan. It has clear links with the General Data Protection Regulation, the Digital Services Act and the Digital Markets Act, as political ads are often disseminated through digital platforms.

(B) Summary of findings

The Board notes the useful additional information provided in advance of the meeting and commitments to make changes to the report.

However, the report still contains significant shortcomings. The Board gives a positive opinion with reservations because it expects the DG to rectify the following aspects:

- (1) The report does not sufficiently present the magnitude and evidence of the internal market and transparency problems. It does not clearly explain the specific problem of online targeting in the political advertisements market.
- (2) The report does not clearly explain the link between the legal basis and the scope of this initiative. It does not clearly explain the legislative gap that it aims to fill.
- (3) The report does not sufficiently quantify costs and benefits and highlight data limitations and assumptions. It is not clear on the impacts on SMEs. It does not sufficiently justify how the initiative is proportionate.

(C) What to improve

This opinion concerns a draft impact assessment which may differ from the final version.

(1) The report should provide a clear understanding of exactly what problem this initiative aims to address. It should objectively define and analyse the problem rather than focussing on political commitments. It should provide in-depth analysis of the context relating to transparency and online targeting. It should better explain how and why targeting in this area is a problem (and not in others), outline the issues on targeting currently not regulated, and illustrate the differences between offline and online targeting. The problem section should describe better the exact nature, scope and scale of the internal market problems. It should demonstrate that this initiative tackles the most prominent obstacles to the internal market. It should also explain better how the identified problems fit in the context of the broader ads market and its regulation.

(2) The report should better explain how transparency and targeting issues are linked with the internal market legal basis. In addition, it needs to ensure the coherence between this initiative and current and proposed legislation. The report should clarify what legislative gap it aims to cover, especially in relation to the proposed Digital Services Act and the revision of the Regulation on the Statute and Funding of European Political Parties and Foundations (EUPP/F). It should explain how its focus on transparency and accountability is compatible with the proposed extension of membership and funding of EUPP/F to non-EU states that are identified as hostile actors.

(3) The report should strengthen the presentation of the options and provide a clear picture of the possible combinations. In particular, it should justify the specific selection of transparency measures, such as the information requirements and targeting measures. The options should include possible mitigation measures for SMEs. The report should not discard options because of earlier political orientations in the Democracy Action Plan.

(4) The report should quantify further the costs and benefits of the initiative to be able to assess its overall proportionality and net economic impact. When doing this, it should discuss relevant data limitations and assumptions and, in the case of lack of quantification, better justify the conclusion that the benefits will outweigh the costs. The analysis should pay due attention to costs for businesses, in particular SMEs. The report should also clearly explain the trade-off between the exemptions for SMEs and the effectiveness of the transparency measures, given the role played by SMEs like Cambridge Analytica.

(5) As the initiative only addresses selected barriers to the single market, the report should assess the impacts on the creation of a single market in a more nuanced way. It should clarify to what extent new obligations might deter actors from entering the political ads market.

(6) The report should present, in a balanced and nuanced way, the views of different stakeholder groups, including the political parties on the different problems and measures.

The Board notes the estimated costs and benefits of the preferred option in this initiative, as summarised in the attached quantification tables.

Some more technical comments have been sent directly to the author DG.

(D) Conclusion

The DG must revise the report in accordance with the Board's findings before launching the interservice consultation.

If there are any changes in the choice or design of the preferred option in the final version of the report, the DG may need to further adjust the attached quantification tables to reflect this.
