35a						(23a) In order to account for the exceptional nature of and potential far-reaching consequences of the activation of EMMERS and the impact of such decision on the national security and defence of the Member States as well as their territorial integrity, the implementing powers should be exceptionally conferred on the Council. The assessment of the need to activate EMMERS for military transport operations can only be exercised by the Member States as such assessment is closely linked to choices that concern core elements of national security, such as where to deploy forces and equipment, within which time frame. Consequently, the activation of EMMERS should be conditioned to a reasoned request from at least one Member State to that effect addressed to the Commission or to the Council in view of the adoption of a Council implementing act.
