ABSTRACT

In Croatia, the process for appointing the new Supreme Court President was concluded. Judicial authorities maintained their efforts to ensure the integrity of judges and state attorneys. The use of electronic communication between courts and users has further increased and amendments would close the gap in the digitalisation of misdemeanour cases. Proposed amendments aim to address the challenges regarding the recruitment of new judges and deputy state attorneys. Some steps have been made to further improve the efficiency of justice, particularly as regards the length of proceedings in litigious commercial and civil cases. Reforms were passed to adapt the system of ‘registrations judges’ to make it compatible with EU law requirements, and to transfer the power to prescribe the implementation of the training for judges from the Ministry of Justice to the President of the Supreme Court.

The implementation of the second Action Plan under the Anti-Corruption Strategy 2021-2030 is ongoing. Significant steps were made as several laws were revised, including the Law on the Office for the Suppression of Corruption and Organised Crime, and institutional changes were introduced to achieve greater efficiency in corruption investigations and prosecutions. Croatia continues to experience a large number of reported corruption crimes, while also the number of initiated investigations has risen, including against several high-level officials. Croatia digitalised the submission of asset declarations by public officials and several sanctions for non-compliance were imposed, although verification remains non-systematic. The Government has increased the resources of the Commission for the Resolution of Conflicts of Interest for lobbying oversight, while several challenges remain, including certain limitations of the information included in the lobbying register. The Ministry of Justice has published the first report on the application of the Code of Ethics for civil servants and employees at State level. Amendments to improve the whistleblower protection law entered into force. While authorities are carrying out systematic verifications, the timely reporting of party and campaign finance continues to present challenges. A comprehensive public procurement reform entered into force to enhance transparency, efficiency and digitalisation.

Amendments to the media law enlarged the regulatory mandate of the independent media regulator to also cover press, and expanded the database of media ownership and financing to include print media, while stakeholders’ concerns persist regarding the oversight of indirect ownership. The same law revised the relevant framework for state advertising and entered into force. There are ongoing concerns regarding the availability of stable financing for public service media. Efforts to improve the safety of journalists continued, as journalists called for measures to strengthen and protect their profession. The financial and governance dependence of local radio and media publishers on local government is linked to concerns about their editorial independence. Meanwhile, a law to address the issue of strategic lawsuits against public participation (SLAPP) targeting journalists has entered into force and a new law on access to information is in preparation.

Local and regional authorities started publishing draft regulations on the public consultations portal, and the impact assessments and evaluations of laws increased. Government authorities further improved the implementation of the recommendations of the People’s Ombudsperson. The opportunities for multiannual funding of the civil society organisations expanded.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Overall, based on the recommendations in the 2025 Rule of Law Report, considering other developments that took place in the period of reference and in addition to recalling the relevant commitments made under the Recovery and Resilience Plan, and the country-specific recommendation under the European Semester on the efficiency of the justice system, the Commission concludes the following:

- Some progress has been made on the recommendation to improve the efficiency of justice, particularly as regards the length of proceedings in litigious commercial and civil cases as the total backlog further decreased, while the length of proceedings continues to be a serious concern. Therefore, it is recommended to Croatia to continue efforts to improve efficiency of justice, including by introducing case management reforms in litigious commercial and civil cases.
- Significant progress has been made with a view to further increase the efficiency of investigations and prosecution of corruption offences, as the Criminal Procedure Code, the Law on the State Attorney's Office, and the Law on the Office for the Suppression of Corruption and Organised Crime entered into force. As the effects in practice still need to materialise, it is recommended to Croatia to take measures to further develop a track record of effective investigations, prosecutions and final judgments in corruption cases, including high-level corruption, including by further improving specialised technical capacities.
- As control rates of asset declarations remain low due to inconsistent, incomparable data structures preventing machine-analysis, it is recommended to Croatia to step up digitalisation efforts to ensure effective and systematic verification of asset declarations.
- Some further progress has been made to address the issue of strategic lawsuits against public participation targeted at journalists, in light of the entry into force of the law on the Protection of Persons Involved in Public Activities, while challenges remain. Therefore, it is recommended to Croatia to broaden the range of available safeguards to improve the protection of journalists, including by reviewing the legal provisions on defamation and encouraging wider use of procedural rules that allow dismissing groundless lawsuits, taking into account the European standards on the protection of journalists.

As regards the other 2025 recommendations, the Commission concludes that:

- Some progress has been made to strengthen the legal framework and oversight mechanisms to ensure a fair and transparent allocation of state advertising at national, regional and local level, including the public tender procedure, as the legislation was amended, while the operational guidance to be adopted by the media regulator remains outstanding. Given that the topics of this recommendation are covered by provisions of the European Media Freedom Act (EMFA), while the Rule of Law Report will continue to monitor significant developments and report on their impact, further follow-up will be ensured as part of the Commission's support to Member States and enforcement of the EMFA.

I. JUSTICE SYSTEM¹

Independence

The level of perceived judicial independence in Croatia continues to be very low among both the general public and companies. Overall, 27% of the general population and 28% of companies perceive the level of independence of courts and judges to be ‘fairly or very good’ in 2026². Among the general public, this figure has slightly decreased in comparison with 2025 (28%) and has significantly increased in comparison with 2022 (20%). The perceived judicial independence among companies remains at the same level as in 2025 (28%) and has increased in comparison with 2022 (23%). The main reasons cited by the general public and by companies for the perceived lack of independence of courts and judges are the perception of interference or pressure from the Government and politicians, and of interference or pressure from economic or other specific interests³.

The process for appointing the new Supreme Court President was concluded. An acting President was leading the Supreme Court since March 2025⁴ and the third attempt to appoint a new President successfully led to Parliament’s appointment of a new Supreme Court President on 15 May 2026⁵. The President of the Supreme Court is appointed by Parliament upon a proposal from the President of the Republic. Three positions for members of the Constitutional Court are still vacant, following an unsuccessful vote in Parliament.

Judicial authorities maintained their efforts to ensure the integrity of judges and state attorneys. The State Judicial Council received 52 requests to enable the initiation of criminal proceedings against judges and, at the request of competent authorities, started 11 disciplinary proceedings in relation to judges, which also concluded with 2 dismissals⁶. Additionally, the State Judicial Council verified external activities of judges⁷. In 2025 the State Attorney’s Council received no further requests from the competent authorities to start disciplinary proceedings regarding state attorneys. The State Judicial Council and the State Attorney’s Council, assisted by their own human resources and access to the electronic ² Figures 48 and 50, 2026 EU Justice Scoreboard and Figures 51 and 53, 2024 EU Justice Scoreboard. The level of perceived judicial independence is categorised as follows: very low (below 30% of respondents perceive judicial independence as fairly good and very good); low (between 30-39%), average (between 40-59%), high (between 60-75%), very high (above 75%).

⁶ Out of these, in 47 cases the requests to initiate criminal proceedings were denied after the Council verified that prosecution service had no open investigations, while in 2 cases the request was granted and in 1 it was dismissed (2 cases ongoing in March 2026). In March 2026, the State Judicial Council kept 8 judges under suspension due to ongoing criminal proceedings, and 3 due to ongoing disciplinary proceedings. The number of initiated disciplinary proceedings remained the same as in 2024. In 2025, the Council issued 8 disciplinary sanctions (7 in 2024): 4 fines, 1 reprimand, one conditional dismissal and 2 dismissals. Croatian Government (2026b), written input, p. 2, and State Judicial Council (2026), written input.

registers, checked all annual updates of asset declarations of judges and state attorneys⁸, and started one disciplinary proceeding regarding a judge for not submitting a declaration for a substantial change in assets, while finding no other substantial irregularities. In May-June 2026, the Supreme Court conducted the procedure for the supervision of the performance of court administration at two municipal courts⁹.

The system of ‘registrations judges’ has been reformed to make it compatible with EU law. In January 2026, the Law on Courts was amended to address requirements set out in the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union (Court of Justice) as regards the ‘registrations judges’ system¹⁰. The amendment removes the possibility for registrations judges to suspend the delivery of an adopted judgment for inconsistency with case law. Instead, a judge or department of judges will be tasked with monitoring case law at all court levels and assisting courts to improve the consistency of decisions¹¹. In the lower courts, these departments will support judges in finding relevant case law; at the appeal courts and the Supreme Court they will receive draft judgments and may inform the panel when a draft might create inconsistency¹². At the Supreme Court, departing from precedent would require the Supreme Court President to transfer the case to an expanded panel¹³. The parties to the case would be informed about such transfers and about the composition of the expanded panel. Stakeholders have broadly welcomed these changes¹⁴.

Quality

The power to prescribe the implementation of the training for judges was transferred from the Ministry of Justice to the President of the Supreme Court. The competence to impose professional development obligations on judges and court presidents was transferred from the Minister of Justice to the Supreme Court President, which the authorities consider better suited to the functioning of the justice system and the professional development needs

⁸ A related milestone 214 (Electronic tools provided and adequate administrative capacities for the State Judicial Council and the State Attorney's Council in the Recovery and Resilience Plan for Croatia) was considered fulfilled in 2022.

¹⁰ Judgment of the CJEU, Joined Cases C-554/21 Hann-Invest, C-622/21 Mineral-Sekuline and C-727/21 Udruga Khl Medveščak Zagreb. The CJEU ruled in a preliminary ruling request of the High Commercial Court regarding a practice in courts of second instance whereby ‘registrations judges’ (judges outside the panel deciding a case tasked with registering adopted judgments and performing a post-hoc case law review), when finding a judgment inconsistent with case law or the ‘legal position’ previously accepted at that court, could stay the delivery of the adopted judgment and request that a section meeting be convened. A ‘legal position’ adopted at a section meeting would be binding on all judicial panels belonging to the section; See also 2025 Rule of Law Report, Croatia, p. 4, and 2024 Rule of Law Report, Croatia, p. 7.

¹³ In December 2025, amendments to the Civil Procedure Law came into force and redefined the expanded panel of the Civil Chamber in the Supreme Court, which include the President of the Civil Chamber, the judge-rapporteur of the panel to which the case was assigned, the Head of the Department for monitoring and studying the case law of the Civil Chamber and 10 judges determined by random selection. Amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code are in preparation to introduce a similar expanded panel also in the Criminal Chamber in the Supreme Court. of judges¹⁵. The law was also amended expressly to prohibit judges from receiving gifts, which until the entry into force of these legislative amendments was partly regulated by the Code of Judicial Ethics¹⁶.

The use of electronic communication between courts and users has further increased and amendments would close the gap in the digitalisation of misdemeanour cases. The justice system has seen some further improvements in digitalisation¹⁷. In 2025 the eFile system was migrated to the State information infrastructure to ensure stability and improve accessibility. The connection of the e-communication and e-citizen systems already allows the submission of court documents, access to case files and requesting of criminal record extracts¹⁸. The Government on 29 June 2026 submitted for the second reading in Parliament amendments to the Law on Misdemeanours to introduce e-Communication in misdemeanour cases before the misdemeanour departments of municipal courts, as well as before the Misdemeanour Courts in Zagreb and Split, which is expected to speed up these proceedings, facilitate faster exercise of rights for citizens and reduce procedural costs. These amendments would also prescribe, as from July 2027, mandatory audio recording of the hearings in misdemeanour court proceedings, which is expected to shorten the duration of the main hearing¹⁹. In 2025, the overall use of the e-Communication system further increased, mostly among professional users and ministries²⁰. By March 2026, more than 600 000 new court decisions from all court instances were published in the new online system, thus increasing public access to judgments²¹.

Proposed amendments aim to address the challenges regarding the recruitment of new judges and deputy state attorneys. In view of the decreasing numbers of judges and deputy state attorneys (judicial officials) employed in courts and state attorney offices²² and lagging new intake into the professions²³, the Government on 29 June 2026 submitted to Parliament

The electronic tools improved in the availability of electronic communication tools at courts (Figure 42), and more significantly in the online accessibility to published judgments (Figure 46) and the arrangements for producing machine-readable judicial decisions (Figure 47).

¹⁸ Croatian Government (2026), written input, p. 6. A related milestone 224 in the Recovery and Resilience Plan for Croatia (Upgraded eSpis system with new functionalities and new architecture integrated into the Shared Services Centre) was considered fulfilled in 2025.

¹⁹ Croatian Government (2026b), written input, p. 7.

²³ According to the ministry, intake of new judges, state attorneys and judicial officials into the system is lagging the rate at which they leave the service. 30% of judicial officials are aged between 60 and 70, while only 7% are aged between 30 and 40. 35% of judges (572), are aged between 60 and 70, while only 6% of are between 30 and 40. 20% of state attorneys are aged 60 to 70. Ministry of justice, administration and digital transformation (2026b).

for adoption the final drafts of the amendments to the Law on the Judicial Academy, Law on State Judicial Councils and the Law on the State Attorney's Council that would simplify entry into the professions of judges and deputy state attorneys. These amendments would remove the requirement to pass exams in the State School for Judicial Officials to become a judge or deputy state attorney and would redefine the State school into a training centre within the Judicial Academy for already appointed judges and state attorneys²⁴.

Efficiency

There has been some progress on the recommendation to improve the efficiency of justice, particularly as regards the length of proceedings in litigious commercial and civil cases²⁵. The 2026 EU Justice Scoreboard shows that backlogs and length of proceedings continue to be a serious concern, despite some improvements in reducing the length and backlog in litigious civil and commercial cases²⁶. At the year-end of 2025, the total backlog further decreased (by nearly 3% compared to the year-end 2024), including in litigious civil and commercial cases (by 2%)²⁷. Despite improvements in some types of cases, such as litigious civil cases and bribery cases, the average length of proceedings in most cases increased, which remains an important concern. In 2025, the average length of proceedings in the first instance courts remained among the longest in the EU with 1 182 days in litigious commercial cases (1 147 days in 2024) and 776 days in litigious civil cases (797 in 2024)²⁸. While the average length of proceedings decreased in first instance administrative cases (256 days, 278 in 2024) and first instance criminal cases before county courts (652 days, 779 days in 2024), it increased in first instance criminal cases before municipal courts (785 days, 752 days in 2024). In narrower category, in 2024, the average length of proceedings before first instance courts further decreased in bribery cases (107 days, 478 days in 2023)²⁹. Considering the overall reduction in the backlog, including in litigious civil and commercial cases, and the decrease in length of proceedings particularly in litigious civil and administrative cases, there has been some progress on the implementation of the recommendation.

²⁴ Among the reasons for the proposed reform was the unnecessary duplication of the exam in the State School for Judicial Officials with the Bar Examination. Ministry of justice, administration and digital transformation (2026b).

²⁶ The data for 2024 continue to show particular challenges in litigious civil and commercial cases, and all non-criminal cases (Figures 5, 12, 13 of the 2026 EU Justice Scoreboard), where lengths of proceedings and backlogs, despite some improvements, remained among the highest in the EU. In the context of the European Semester, the Commission has proposed that the Council recommend that Croatia “[f]urther improve[s] the efficiency of the justice system”. European Commission (2026) 211 final, CSR 3.

²⁹ Figures 20 and 21, 2026 EU Justice Scoreboard. A related target 238 (Reducing the average length of court cases for corruption and organized crime offences) in the Recovery and Resilience Plan for Croatia was considered fulfilled in 2025.

II. ANTI-CORRUPTION FRAMEWORK

The perception among experts, citizens and businesses is that the level of corruption in the public sector remains high. In the 2025 Corruption Perceptions Index by Transparency International, Croatia scores 47/100, ranks 24th in the European Union and 63rd globally³⁰. This perception remained relatively stable over the past five years³¹. The 2026 Special Eurobarometer on Corruption shows that 88% of respondents consider corruption to be widespread in their country (EU average 71%) and 61% of respondents feel personally affected by corruption in their daily lives (EU average 30%). As regards businesses, 94% of companies consider that corruption is widespread (EU average 65%) and 62% consider that corruption is a problem when doing business (EU average 37%). Furthermore, 49% of respondents find that there are enough successful prosecutions to deter people from corrupt practices (EU average 38%), while 20% of companies believe that people and businesses caught for bribing a senior official are appropriately punished (EU average 31%)³².

The 2025 Report on the implementation of the second Anti-Corruption Action Plan (2025-2027) is being finalised. As part of the 2021-2030 Anti-Corruption Strategy³³, the second Action Plan³⁴ contained 63 actions for 2025, covering legislative, institutional and preventive measures to strengthen public sector integrity, transparency and accountability. Key actions implemented in the course of 2025 included, among others, enhanced lobbying regulations, stricter whistleblower protection and a new specialised anti-corruption court division in Varaždin. The main initiatives planned for 2026 include amendments to the act on rights to access to information and to the public procurement legislation³⁵. Apart from the regular implementation monitoring, an independent final evaluation of the strategy is envisaged for 2030.

There has been significant progress on the recommendation to revise laws to further increase the efficiency of corruption investigations and prosecutions³⁶. The amended Law on the Office for the Suppression of Corruption and Organised Crime entered into force on 13 November 2025. The changes aim to accelerate and decentralise complex, high-level corruption investigations and prosecutions of the specialised prosecution service (USKOK)³⁷. Key amendments include jurisdictional changes to decentralise and reduce the workload of

³¹ In 2021, the score was 47, while in 2025, the score was 47. The score significantly increases/decreases when it changes more than five points; improves/deteriorates (changes between 4-5 points); is relatively stable (changes from 1-3 points) in the last five years.

³⁵ Country visit Croatia, Ministry of Justice, Administration and Digital Transformation, amendments to the access to information act were previously envisaged for 2025 and will be based on an already finalised evaluation (see related milestone 243).

³⁶ The 2025 Rule of Law Report recommended Croatia to “take forward plans to revise the Criminal Procedure Code and the Law on the Office for the Suppression of Corruption and Organised Crime, in line with the Anti-Corruption Strategy, so as to further increase the efficiency of investigations and prosecution of corruption offences”. Some progress was previously assessed on this recommendation in 2025 and 2024.

courts that deal with USKOK cases³⁸. The judges presiding the panel in these cases are now obliged to prioritise USKOK cases and to concentrate the number of hearings³⁹. More serious and complex corruption cases, as well as those concerning a public official and abuse of office, remain in the competence of USKOK⁴⁰, which may also transfer corruption cases to competent municipal or county state attorneys⁴¹. The law lowered the seniority requirements to be eligible for the post of the USKOK Director and limited the tenure to two consecutive terms⁴². Beyond this, amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code entered into force in February 2026 introducing an in camera procedure for the speedier examination at the indictment stage without the participation of the parties⁴³. Amendments to the Criminal Code entered into force in November 2025, now criminalising all acts of bribery of members of Parliament (both national and foreign) in one provision⁴⁴ and providing for new rules of jurisdiction regarding the liability of legal persons⁴⁵. Since January 2026, a new specialised court department for corruption and organised crime established at the County Court in Varaždin is operational. Overall, there has been significant progress on the implementation of the recommendation.

Authorities are further developing a track record of investigations, prosecutions and convictions, including in high-level cases. Corruption occurrence is still high. At the same time, authorities are actively pursuing corruption and several high-level officials are under investigation⁴⁶. The length of USKOK-led proceedings was overall shorter in 2025 compared to 2024, with a higher share of investigations concluded within a year and fewer lasting longer⁴⁷. The amendments to the Criminal Procedure Act aim to address a bottleneck

³⁹ Amended Art. 30, Law on the Office for the Suppression of Corruption and Organised Crime.

⁴⁰ Art. 21 (1) and (2). Municipal prosecutors are now by law obliged to inform USKOK.

⁴¹ Ex-officio corruption prosecutions of municipal and county prosecutors may also be taken over by USKOK. Specific criteria for USKOK intervention or transfer of cases are, however, not stipulated in the law.

⁴⁵ Jurisdiction for legal persons is now based on their registration in Croatia, irrespective of the natural persons.

identified by the State Attorney's Office in the indictment panels before the courts⁴⁸. More than half of the convictions in USKOK corruption cases, including in high-level corruption cases, were based on plea bargaining agreements between the defendants and the State Attorney's Office without a full trial taking place⁴⁹. The specialised anti-corruption prosecution service (USKOK) and the specialised anti-corruption police (PNUSKOK) continue to view the level of access to relevant registries⁵⁰ and of cooperation between the relevant national state agencies as adequate to carry out their tasks⁵¹. The revised Law on the State Attorney's Office adopted in October 2025 allows the State Attorney General to establish specialised teams as advisory, instructive and coordinating bodies⁵². While human and financial resources are increasing, the high turnover of staff in USKOK continues to present a challenge⁵³. The EPPO highlighted shortcomings in the level of specialisation and expertise of the police and a lack of necessary technical equipment to investigate complex EPPO cross-border corruption cases, with the police responding by providing specific training for the officers working with the EPPO⁵⁴. As a mitigation measure, the Government is investing in both, in order to enhance technical capacities⁵⁵. There are also challenges regarding law enforcement's expertise and proactive investigations of foreign bribery, with no cases initiated to date, but the Government aims to report back to the OECD on its enforcement efforts by December 2026⁵⁶. The extent to which the recent amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code, the Law on the State Attorney's Office and to the Law on the Office for the Suppression of Corruption and Organised Crime will increase the effectiveness of investigation and prosecution of corruption offence in practice will need to be assessed based on monitoring enforcement.

Croatia digitalised the submission of asset declarations by public officials and several sanctions for non-compliance were imposed, although verification remains non-systematic. Croatia's comprehensive legal framework obliges all elected officials, public officials, state attorneys and judges to submit conflicts of interest and asset declarations⁵⁷. The Commission for the Resolution of Conflicts of Interest (CRC) checks all declarations under their jurisdiction as to their technical correctness⁵⁸. The veracity of the declaration's content is checked for selected officials on an annual risk-based verification prioritisation plan⁵⁹. The low control rates are reportedly due to the complexity of the verification procedure and the inconsistent, incomparable data structure, preventing machine-analysis⁶⁰. Several sanctions for non-compliance, including against ministers, were imposed⁶¹. Stakeholders point out that the level of fines may act as an insufficient deterrent⁶². Croatia's asset declaration system has improved in terms of digitalisation, facilitating public officials' electronic submission of their declarations⁶³, while the tool for comparing asset declarations, as part of a broader IT platform, remains under construction⁶⁴. The CRC continues to note that it can only carry out manual verifications and that the system does not yet allow for automatic notifications of discrepancies between declarations and data in other registries, making cross-verification challenging⁶⁵. In November 2025, the Parliament appointed a new president of the CRC⁶⁶.

The Government has increased resources for lobbying oversight, while several challenges remain, including certain limitations of the information included in the lobbying register. In 2025, both human and financial resources of the Commission for the Resolution of Conflicts of Interest (CRC) dedicated to lobbying oversight were increased⁶⁷. While the Government confirms that the register is harmonised with the existing legislative framework, the competent entity for the lobbying register's maintenance (CRC) called for further legal revisions to address the shortcomings it has identified a year after the register's operation. These include ambiguities in the personal scope and in conflicting definitions of gifts in the Law on Lobbying and the Law on the Prevention of Conflicts of Interest, with risks of legal uncertainty⁶⁸. The lobbying register is publicly available and includes certain data on interest representatives to be updated every two years⁶⁹. The register could be further improved by adding details on the specific legislation or decisions targeted in the lobbying process, the interest representatives' available lobbying budget or expenses invested, and on the actual lobbying meetings that took place⁷⁰, which would increase the transparency⁷¹. While public officials are obliged to disclose lobbying meetings of importance, there are no criteria or practical guidance to define this, and disclosure practice is fragmented⁷². Stakeholders, including standards bodies, have indicated that the lobbying register is insufficiently comprehensive and lacks a comprehensive public record of lobbying inputs and contacts ('legislative footprint') to strengthen transparency of decision-making⁷³.

⁵⁹ 2025 Rule of Law Report, Croatia, p. 9. Due to limited oversight capacities, the CRC's prioritisation strategy focused on high-level officials in 2024 (President, Prime Minister, ministers), and in 2025 on State Secretaries, local officials and local company board members. The CRC can also launch content verification procedures ex-officio upon suspicion raised by complaints or media reports.

The Ministry of Justice has published the first report on the application of the Code of Ethics for civil servants and employees at State level. The Code of Ethics for civil servants and employees at State level entered into force in 2025⁷⁴. The report details the submitted recommendations and complaints about the conduct of civil servants in state bodies. For the first time, the data supporting the report were submitted exclusively via the electronic eEtika information system, speeding up and thus enhancing more effective data collection from the Ethics Commissioners appointed in every state and judicial authority to monitor compliance and receive complaints⁷⁵. As regards the 2022 Code of Conduct for high-level officials⁷⁶, including ministers and state secretaries, the Implementation Council does not have sanctioning powers to enforce the rules of the Code on integrity, conflicts of interest, gifts, and post-employment. Instead, mitigating measures in response to the recommendations of the Implementation Council as a preventive body remain at the discretion of the State entity where the concerned public official works⁷⁷. While statistics exist on the CRC's caselaw and the sanctions imposed, there are no statistical data on the number of conflicts of interest detected, recommendations issued, and mitigation measures applied⁷⁸.

Amendments to improve the whistleblower protection law entered into force. Since 13 November 2025, new whistleblowing rules extended the protection to individuals who report

⁷⁰ Interest representatives must report to the CRC by end of March each year, including on meetings, but these data are not recorded in the lobbying register, and are made available only following access to information requests. 2025 Rule of Law Report, Croatia, p. 10. RRP milestone 237 (Setting up an IT platform to monitor the implementation of national anti-corruption measures) is not yet fulfilled (as part of the future 9th payment request).

⁷¹ This criticism was also expressed by the OECD and civil society (Civil Liberties Union for Europe (2025)). OECD identified some areas which could be aligned with best practice, e.g. the definition of lobbying is narrow as it only focuses on direct communications with a lobbied person, and the list of exemptions is quite broad, including persons participating as experts in government meetings. OECD (2024).

It cannot reverse the public official's decision breaching the Code nor enforce information-sharing in case of the public official's lack of cooperation with the CRC, see GRECO (2026), recommendation ii, paras. 14-15, pp. 4-5; GRECO (2020), paras. 92-94, p. 29, highlighting also the need for practical guidance for public officials.

on irregularities⁷⁹. Individuals who report directly to the police or the State Attorney's Office now have the same right to protection as those who submit reports to the Ombudsperson, eliminating previous uncertainties as to when the right to protection was acquired. New deadlines also apply for court proceedings to ensure faster, more effective whistleblower protection in practice, which aims to address the previously indicated lengthy proceedings on retaliatory measures taken against whistleblowers, indicated as discouraging reporting⁸⁰. While the number of internal whistleblower reports to the Ombudsperson's Office dropped in 2025, the Office dealt with many new cases following external reports⁸¹. The IT anti-corruption platform tool would include a safe electronic submission channel for whistleblower reporting to the Ombudsperson, which is in the testing phase and should be operational in the first half of 2026⁸². The evaluation of the public awareness-raising campaign conducted by the Ministry of Justice found that the public places the highest level of trust for external reporting in the Ombudsperson's Office⁸³. Stakeholders consider that the offence introduced to the criminal code in 2024 criminalising unauthorised disclosures of information from ongoing criminal investigations could discourage the reporting of corruption⁸⁴, while the Government maintains that there is no evidence that this provision is deterring whistleblowers from reporting criminal offences.

The State Audit Office reported no substantial violations of the rules on political party financing, while some shortcomings remain, and the timely reporting of party and campaign finance continues to present a challenge. In 2025, the State Electoral Commission (SEC), as the oversight body over political party and campaign financing⁸⁵, and the State Audit Office found no substantial violation of political party and campaign financing rules, but concluded on a number of irregularities, as many political parties still fail to fully comply with reporting obligations⁸⁶. Consequently, the SEC adopted several decisions in 2025 on political parties and independent councillors that had not submitted their annual reports on time in 2024 and 2025, withdrawing the right of payment of regular annual funds or temporarily suspending disbursement as sanctions⁸⁷. As for donations, in 2025, the

SEC notified the State Attorney's Office of about 77 cases in which political parties and independent members of Parliament had either failed to submit the required half-yearly report (50 cases) or had failed to submit it on time (27 cases)⁸⁸. For donations and expenditures, the political party and campaign financing law sets upper ceilings for donations, and donations through third-parties are prohibited. There are, however, no regulations regarding third-party campaigning⁸⁹ and corporate donations from companies involved in public contracts⁹⁰.

The Government is implementing a comprehensive public procurement reform, which could contribute to reducing corruption in this high-risk area. Businesses' attitudes towards corruption in the EU shows that 34% of companies in Croatia (EU average 30%) think that corruption has prevented them from winning a public tender or a public procurement contract in practice in the last three years⁹¹. 37% of companies perceive the level of independence of the public procurement review body (the State Commission for Supervision of Public Procurement Procedures-DKOM) as very or fairly good, which has significantly increased in comparison to 2025 (27%)⁹². The Single Market and Competitiveness Scoreboard on access to public procurement in Croatia reports 31% of single bids for 2025 (27% EU average). High-level cases, also involving members of Government, are pending before criminal courts⁹³. On 16 May 2026, amendments to the Law on Public Procurement entered into force introducing measures to enhance transparency, efficiency and digitalisation, carrying the potential to reduce corruption risks and conflicts of interest at all stages of the procurement procedure⁹⁴. Furthermore, the changes introduced aim to address the previously identified lack of legal protection⁹⁵ and provide an opportunity to address the lack of competence of the DKOM to review contracts in simplified procurement procedures below the national threshold, through which a large part of the national budget is spent⁹⁶. Additionally, the amendments aim to address the risks of irregularities in the contract implementation phase⁹⁷ by introducing mechanisms for verifying contract execution and introducing the obligation to publish all contract amendments. administrative fees for companies to initiate reviews before DKOM were reported to be the main reason for the low number of reviewed contracts⁹⁸. Following the appointment of new DKOM members by Parliament in July 2025, the three councils hearing appeals have been fully operational since late August 2025. DKOM transmitted two notifications to the State Attorney's Office in 2025. Overall, sectors vulnerable to corruption are reportedly the health, renewable energy, environment and construction sectors, creating uncertainty for businesses⁹⁹. The new Law on Foreign Investment in force since 13 November 2025 mandates prior approval for third country investments and entities under third country control of sectors deemed critical, including integrity and criminal records checks, including corruption convictions of foreign investors¹⁰⁰. In June 2025, Croatia was removed from the 'grey list' of jurisdictions under enhanced monitoring of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF)¹⁰¹, signalling that Croatia improved transparency and its capacity to investigate, prosecute and sanction the laundering of corruption proceeds, which may enhance investor confidence and access to capital markets.

III. MEDIA PLURALISM AND MEDIA FREEDOM

Amendments to the media law enlarged the regulatory mandate of the independent media regulator. With a view to alignment with the European Media Freedom Act on 26 March 2026, a new law amending certain provisions of the media law entered into force, enlarging the Agency for Electronic Media (AEM) mandate to cover also print media and additional functions, such as assessing media market concentrations. This initiative is part of a broader effort to establish a unified regulatory framework, aimed at enhancing comprehensive media oversight. Croatia's media regulator has scored low risk by the Media Pluralism Monitor (MPM) as for its independence and effectiveness¹⁰², while human and financial resources are assessed by the media regulator as matching its responsibilities¹⁰³. In view of the amendments, the Media Council – the main governing and regulatory body – will be tasked with overseeing the appointments of the management of public service bodies¹⁰⁴. Stakeholders, however, have expressed some concerns over the indefinite re-election of the Media Council's members, and that election and dismissal processes are controlled by the parliamentary majority, with discussions focusing on term limits¹⁰⁵. In arguing for strengthened safeguards for the Council, stakeholders pointed to its future role in issuing ordinances setting minimum criteria for the public procurement of programme production and broadcasting for media generally¹⁰⁶.

Discussions on public service media reform focus mainly on the model for electing management bodies. These debates are part of broader legislative and governance reforms¹⁰⁷. Moreover, some stakeholders have expressed concerns about current appointment procedures, particularly about potential political influence, notably highlighting possible influence on editorial decision-making by the management of the Croatian News Agency (HINA)¹⁰⁸. The Media Pluralism Monitor noted medium-high risk of independence of public service media, pointing particularly to persistent structural vulnerabilities in governance and editorial practices despite a relatively comprehensive legal framework¹⁰⁹. Anticipated legislative reforms to address these concerns for the Croatian Radio-Television (HRT) are expected to be presented by late 2026. There are no detailed plans reported for the reform of HINA¹¹⁰.

There are ongoing concerns regarding the availability of stable financing for public service media. While HINA and HRT have been funded based on licence fees for over three decades, new funding strategies are currently under consideration to enhance financial security in a context of falling licence fee revenues¹¹¹. In 2025, HRT incurred an additional deficit of EUR 50 million, with EUR 22 million attributed to the enduring gap between licence fees collected and the costs associated with content production and distribution, as well as substantial incidental costs following staff reduction¹¹², which have attracted some expressions of concern from stakeholders, including because of existing funding shortfall¹¹³. Since 2010, HRT has experienced significant financial challenges. The licence fee has remained at the same rate, resulting in declining revenues in real terms. The current funding model is generally viewed as outdated, prompting ongoing discussions about potential alternatives. Stakeholders have highlighted persistent issues with sustainability of financing of public service media through the licence fee system, noting that relying on annual state subsidies granted in addition by Government decision raises concerns about predictability, stability and independence from the political influence¹¹⁴.

Adopted amendments expand the database of media ownership and financing to include print media, while stakeholders' concerns persist regarding the oversight of indirect ownership. The centralised online media ownership and financing platform provides data on media entities and their owners, as recorded in official registers, along with information on revenues, funding methods and sources, and concessions held¹¹⁵. Stakeholders were generally positive about the database¹¹⁶. Moreover, the Media Pluralism Monitor assessed that transparency of media ownership has improved significantly following the introduction of the media ownership database, scoring low risk¹¹⁷. However, concerns were raised by some stakeholders regarding silent owners of media providers¹¹⁸, who are not required to be listed in the register of beneficial ownership¹¹⁹. Stakeholders have also highlighted some practical shortcomings in the monitoring of advertising funding by state-owned enterprises¹²⁰.

A law revising the relevant framework for state advertising entered into force¹²¹. Stakeholders continue to express concerns of perceived favouritism towards media outlets with government affiliations and the challenges with complying with reporting requirements, especially at local level¹²². The law, adopted with a view to alignment with the EMFA, entered into force on 26 March 2026. It has the objective of establishing a legal framework and oversight mechanisms to ensure the fair and transparent allocation of state advertising¹²³. However, further specification of the framework is required through more specific and necessary guidelines to be issued by the media regulator to make this framework operational¹²⁴. The law retained the existing legal requirement that 15% of public advertising budgets must be allocated to regional and local media. Therefore, some progress has been made on the implementation of the recommendation.

The financial and governance dependence of local radio and media publishers on local government is linked to concerns about their editorial independence. The Ministry of Culture noted that many regional media publishers and commercial radio operators receive funding from municipal bodies, and this can put at risk their independence¹²⁵. Similarly, reports indicate that political influence in local media is exerted through supplementary funding, advertising revenue and ownership, with some outlets under local government ownership¹²⁶. While the risk is assessed as medium-low, the MPM highlighted that local media markets, particularly regional television and radio, are rather vulnerable to political capture and ownership concentration¹²⁷. In particular, the MPM flagged that many local online outlets rely heavily on reproducing official information from municipal authorities, which raises concerns about editorial diversity and independence¹²⁸. Furthermore, local government officials combine their public functions with membership in the management bodies of local commercial TV and radio stations¹²⁹. Stakeholders also report the closure or marginalisation of several national and local media outlets, including the withdrawal of funding, which adversely affects the working conditions of many media professionals¹³⁰. The Ministry of Culture suggested that alternative funding sources would be considered, such as a

The Media Pluralism Monitor also noted that in 2025 significant funds were channelled through marketing agencies without public tenders.

¹²¹ The 2025 Rule of Law Report recommended Croatia to "step up efforts to strengthen the legal framework and oversight mechanisms to ensure a fair and transparent allocation of state advertising at national, regional and local level, including the public tender procedure". Trends in access to public information remain unchanged with some delays or partial information being provided, while work on a new access-to-information law is ongoing.

The Protection of the right to information in Croatia scores low risk, as assessed by the MPM¹³². However, some practical challenges continue in accessing information, such as delays, the broad application of exceptions and obstacles related to the classification of information¹³³. In 2025, a Government-established working group analysed expert recommendations to amend the Law on the Right of Access to Information, resulting in a draft proposal to enhance elements such as proactive publication, public consultation, information officers and the resolution of information access requests¹³⁴. After public consultation, which is planned for the end of 2026/beginning of 2027, the draft will be submitted to the Government. In 2025, the Information Commissioner actively promoted access to information and conducted 39 training sessions on the right of access to information, including specialist sessions for journalists and other media professionals.

Efforts to improve the safety of journalists continued, as journalists called for further measures to strengthen and protect their profession. The journalist community described continued challenges due to lacking self-regulatory measures to bolster the status of journalists¹³⁵. In response to these challenges, the Government adopted the Action Plan for the Development of Culture and Media on 6 November 2025, with objectives set until 2027¹³⁶. The Ministry of Culture is also exploring options for a mandatory register for journalists, influencers and content creators to support specific protective actions, though this initiative also elicited concerns and reservations from journalist representatives questioning the potential negative impact on journalistic independence¹³⁷. Regarding the safety of journalists, in the reporting period, the Council of Europe Platform to promote the protection and safety of journalists recorded seven new alerts concerning Croatia. Five of the alerts concerned harassment and intimidation of journalists, while two other incidents were recorded concerning attacks on the physical safety and integrity of journalist¹³⁸. Moreover, Mapping Media Freedom has noted 22 new alerts since the publication of the last report. Sixteen of them concerned verbal attacks, including threats or harassment; five concerned interferences, with the most common example being obstruction of journalistic activity; while the remaining alerts relate to physical assaults, attacks on property, and legal incidents¹³⁹. According to data provided by the Ministry of the Interior, in 2025, 19 incidents involving 23 criminal offences against journalists and other media professionals were recorded. The authorities reported that, in all cases, cooperation took place under the Cooperation Agreement concluded in September 2023 between the Ministry of the Interior and the Croatian Journalists' Association and the Trade Union of Croatian Journalists¹⁴⁰. The MPM underlines the medium-high risk as regards the journalistic profession, standards and protection¹⁴¹. Against this background, the Government in 2025 organised training sessions within the largest media outlets, involving over 180 sector professionals, to stimulate and maintain a secure environment¹⁴², while the workshops continued in 2026¹⁴³. The Protocol on the conduct of police, journalists and other media professionals during public gatherings continues to serve as a valuable tool for addressing safety concerns¹⁴⁴.

There was some further progress on the recommendation to address the issue of strategic lawsuits against public participation targeting journalists, as the anti-SLAPP law entered into force¹⁴⁵. As mentioned in previous Rule of Law Reports and stated by stakeholders, the strategic lawsuits against public participation are an issue both in numbers and seriousness¹⁴⁶. The analysis of the Government, which is based on a different methodology, presented a lower number of cases¹⁴⁷. On 19 June 2026, Parliament adopted the Law on the Protection of Persons Involved in Public Activities, designed to transpose the Anti-SLAPP Directive, and it entered into force on 7 July 2026¹⁴⁸. The consultations on this draft law were prepared through an inter-institutional framework involving relevant government ministries, the judiciary, and media stakeholders, though stakeholders mentioned shortcomings in the inclusiveness of the consultation process¹⁴⁹. On substance, the scope covered includes both domestic and cross-border civil law cases, excluding however criminal cases¹⁵⁰. This is of concern for stakeholders, who point out that most of SLAPP cases faced by journalists are launched on grounds of criminal defamation or insult¹⁵¹. CSO ¹⁴⁵ The 2025 Rule of Law Report recommended Croatia to "continue efforts to address the issue of strategic lawsuits against public participation targeted at journalists, including by reviewing the legal provisions on defamation and encouraging wider use of procedural rules that allow dismissing groundless lawsuits, taking into account the European standards on the protection of journalists". Some progress was previously assessed on this recommendation in 2025, 2024 and 2023.

¹⁴⁶ The 2025 Report reported that a survey conducted by the Croatian Journalists' Association had counted that as of May 2025 at least 696 active lawsuits against journalists and media outlets were recorded, 2025 Rule of Law Report, Croatia, pp. 15-16; Country visit Croatia, Ombudsperson, Croatian Journalists' Association, Trade Union of Journalists and Centre for Democracy and Law Miko Tripalo.

¹⁴⁷ The Ministry of Justice, Public Administration and Digital Transformation's analysis identified 32 cases (25 civil and 7 criminal) that in their assessment "could potentially qualify as SLAPP". Moreover, as reported by the Government, through an analysis conducted via the eSpis court management system, they identified 20 civil court cases in 2025 that could potentially qualify as SLAPP proceedings, of which 9 were concluded with final judgments, Croatian Government (2026b), additional written input, p. 28.

representatives raised that SLAPP cases often remain unreported¹⁵². Considering that legislative amendments entered into force, there was some further progress on the implementation of the recommendation.

IV. OTHER INSTITUTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CHECKS AND BALANCES

Local and regional authorities started publishing draft regulations on the public consultation portal, and the regularity of impact assessments and evaluations of laws increased. Application of SME tests and the administrative burden reduction on businesses continued¹⁵³. Local and regional self-government units started using the e-Consultations portal for consultations on the draft regulations under their competence in 2025¹⁵⁴. There were 809 consultations conducted on the portal at national level in 2025¹⁵⁵. The length of consultations again improved. The share of comments received that remained unanswered slightly increased¹⁵⁶. The number of regulatory impact assessments at national level further increased to nearly half of all 2025 proposals¹⁵⁷. In August 2025, the Government's Legislation Office completed the Technical Support Instrument Project 'Strengthening the Implementation of Ex-post Evaluation in Croatia'. In this two-year project, a total of five ex-post evaluations were carried out¹⁵⁸. In October 2025, an additional regulatory evaluation was launched by a ministerial decision¹⁵⁹.

More than half of the companies surveyed in Croatia express confidence in the effectiveness of investment protection. 57% of companies are very or fairly confident that investments are protected by law and courts, a figure which has increased in comparison with 2025 (53%)¹⁶⁰. As regards authorities relevant for economic operators, 35% perceive the level of independence of the national competition authority (The Croatian Competition Agency) as very or fairly good, a figure which has slightly increased in comparison with 2025 (32%)¹⁶¹. The High Administrative Court has jurisdiction in several business-related cases, including in cases related to public procurement, public concessions, public contracts

¹⁵² European Federation of Journalists (2026), written input, p. 22. As reported by the Information Commission general trends in appeal cases remain comparable with previous years.

¹⁵⁴ Until January 2026, there were 27 such consultations at local level. Country visit Croatia, Government's Legislation Office.

¹⁵⁵ There were 896 consultations in 2024 and 1 028 in 2022. Country visit Croatia, Government's Legislation Office.

¹⁵⁷ In 2025, regulatory impact assessments were conducted for 85 draft laws, representing 46% of all proposals. Croatian Government (2026b), written input, p. 16.

and economic regulation. A number of judicial mechanisms to improve efficiency are available in these cases, including the possibility to apply for interim measures¹⁶².

On 1 January 2026, Croatia had 33 leading judgments of the European Court of Human Rights pending implementation, an increase of three compared to the previous year¹⁶³. At that time, Croatia's rate of leading judgments from the past 10 years that had been implemented was at 63% (compared to 68% in 2025; 37% remained pending), and the average time that the judgments had been pending implementation was two years and five months (compared to two years and three months in 2025)¹⁶⁴. The oldest leading judgment, pending implementation for more than nine years concerns violations of the right to a fair trial¹⁶⁵. As regards the respect of payment deadlines, on 31 December 2025 there were seven cases in total awaiting confirmation of payments (compared to 12 in 2024)¹⁶⁶. On 17 June 2026, the number of leading judgments pending implementation had decreased to 30¹⁶⁷.

Government authorities further improved the implementation of recommendations by the Ombudsperson. The Ombudsperson fulfils the role of the National Human Rights Institution and is accredited with A-status¹⁶⁸. In 2025, the Ombudsperson's human resources increased, and its financial resources increased significantly¹⁶⁹. The Government's Office for Human Rights and Minority Rights continued with its practice of collecting information from all relevant authorities about the implementation of the recommendations from the last Ombudsperson's report. In 2025, according to the Ombudsperson, the implementation of recommendations again improved, as around 65.2% of all recommendations given in 2024 have either been already implemented or are in the process of being implemented (61% of those issued in 2023 were implemented in 2024)¹⁷⁰. According to the Government, the analysis has shown that 72% of recommendations issued in 2024 have been implemented, are being implemented, or are in the implementation plan (in comparison to 73.3% of those issued in 2023). As regards access to information, the Ombudsperson did not report any significant challenges. As previously reported, the Parliament has still not discussed the recent annual reports of the Ombudsperson, which the Ombudsperson characterised as an obstacle to its effective work¹⁷¹. In 2025, the number of complaints from citizens received by the Ombudsperson increased by 21% compared to 2024¹⁷².

The opportunities for multiannual funding of civil society organisations expanded. The civic space in Croatia is considered by Civicus to be ‘narrowed’¹⁷³. As reported in 2025, the Government Working Group completed the technical drafting process of its National Plan for Creating an Enabling Environment, and the internal governmental consultation is pending¹⁷⁴. Civil society organisations (CSOs) stated that delays in the adoption of the national plan present a challenge for the predictability of the operating space for civil society¹⁷⁵. The trend in funding moving from short-term support towards multiannual systematic and continuous financing, welcomed by CSOs¹⁷⁶, was maintained with several multi-year financing projects, and the Government indicated its plans to expand this approach to all funding in future¹⁷⁷. However, CSOs also raised insufficient funding as a challenge¹⁷⁸.

¹⁷³ The score is 71/100. Ratings by Civicus are on a five-category scale defined as: open, narrowed, obstructed, repressed and closed.
